We invite the attention of Grangers to the resolutions of Clio Grange, published in our Grange Column of last week, on the subject of excluding bagging and ties on the purchase of bales of cotton from the producer. A brief explanation of which is that the speculator proposes to some hidden and almost miraculous way into the transparently clear, red-colored, and almost living gem. Imagination itself fails to find a theory to account for all this, and no progress in chemistry can invent a theory to account for all this, and no progress in chemistry can invent a theory to fit it. It is a somewhat curious coincidence that the ruby, as well as the diamond and other precious stones, is so often found associated with gold; where they are, there is gold almost sure buy the farmer's cotton and take his bagging and ties with the bargain, but without allowing any compensation for the latter. Not content with fraudulently depressing the natural price of cotton by "bulls," "bears," "syndicates," "corners" and "futures," these speculating characters new come boldly to the front and require the farmer to relinquish at the ginhouse the whole value of bagging and ties, without which his cotton cannot be put on the market at all. Presuming the farmers to be so inseparably wedded to this process of baling their cotton for sale and shipment, that they have not the energy to adopt any other plan of realizing the productions of their labors, and that they will submit to the shave as they have on former occasions, with little more than a suppressed growl, with perhaps a few "cuss vords." When it comes to this kind of reckless "bearing" and tyranny by one of two parties mutuelly dependant upon each other for business and support, it is high time the weaker party should rise up and shake nately not always identical) are equally and vitally interested in the defence against this new mode of filching their hard earnings. And we cannot forbear the opportunity of inviting all unorgansed farmers to come forward and make common cause with us in this as in all other matters pertaining to our mutual interests. But the Grange, being already organized, though not so closely united, we regret to say, as their interests demand, is expected to act promptly but wisely. Then what remedy shall we suggest? 1st. It would be well to have a full and free expression of opinion from all Grangers upon this subject. An overwhelming expression of rebuke may

It will enable him to put up a larger value in a smaller bale, and brake up the traffic in bales of lint. It will lessen the expense of bagging and ties, freight, commissions, patching, raking, sampling and other subterfuges for taking without leave, and the cotton business could be managed with fewer middiemen assistants. It would give employment to a large number of operatives at home, re-

A Noble Revenge.

The coffin was a plain one—a poor, miserable pine coffin. No flowers on its top, no lining of rose white satin for the pale brow; no smooth ribbons about the coarse shroud. The brown hair was laid decently back, but there was no crimped cap, with its nest tie beneath the chin. The sufferer from cruel poverty smiled in her sleep.

"I want to see my mother," sobbed a poor child as the city undertaker screwed down the top.

"You can't—get out of the way, boy! Why don't somebody take the brat?"

"Only let me see her one minute," cried the hapless, homeless orphan, clutching the side of the charity box, and as he gazed into that rough face, anguish tears streamed repidly down the cheek on which no childish bloom ever lingered. Oh, it was pitiful to hear him cry, "Only once let me see my mother, cally once!"

Quick and brutally the hard-hearted monster struck the boy sway, so that he recled with the blow. For a moment the boy stood panting with grief and rage; his bine eyes distended, his lips sprang apart, a fire gittering through his tears, as he raised his puny arm, and with a most unchildleh accent, screamed:

"When I'm a man I'll kill you for that?"

All farmers should heartly unite to establish, on every ten miles square, cotton mills with the Clement attachment, and spin their lint from the seed intesthread and sell directly to the weaver. This change in the form of offering his fabric for sale would enure to the benefit of the farmer in various ways. It will enable him to put up a larger is delicated in the head cool in warm weather. AUGUSTA, GEORGIA, Nov. 1, 1877.

MY customers know that I have heretofore led the "Furniture" trade of the South, in style, quality and prices. The time has come when these goods can be purchased as cheap from me as in the North and West. I do not go backwards, but continually raise the standard of my goods, and add new styles. I have made reductions in prices wherever possible, and spared no expense to place in your hands a Price List that will help you to purchase goods. I respectfully invite you to call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere. Orders by mail will receive as much attention as if given in person. It wor' make the list too large to describe and copy all the different prices of Bedroom, Parlo, Jais, Dining Room, Office, Standing, Parlor and Ladies' Desks, Secretaries, Dwarf Libraries, and Book Cases, manufactured by me, and therefore, this list contains only a few of the prices of goods kept by me.

Thanking you for past favors, I remain, yours respectfully,
